ANCIEN
& MODERNE

Moderne created their eye-catching presentation as an ode to the Orient Express, becoming inspired by influences of the elegant Art Deco time period and its old-world subtleties.

“After the sparkling premiere of the selection of glassware at Maison et Objet last January, we are heading back to Paris, this time with pieces picked for its special set-up. With our luxurious and whimsical selection, we will serve you Bohemian perfection in the atmosphere of the Orient,” said president and founder of LASVIT, Leon Jakimič.

The pop-up, which will capture the atmosphere of the legendary long-distance train, represents a fusion of time-honored craftsmanship with a 21st century lifestyle. LASVIT will accompany other well-known companies which were selected for their exquisite style and creativity.

The imaginative train will be in station from January 17th to the 21st. All aboard!

LASVIT PRESENTS

Crystal Rock by Arik Levy

Certainly not from the Stone Age but closer to the fictional Kryptonite, Crystal Rock appears in the cave of the future as an ambassador to the fusion of nature and man, light and reflection, transparency and mass. All these characteristics are combined within a perfectly cut, yet roughly sculpted, contemporary silex that interacts between light and darkness, suspended in the air like a frozen shooting star.

Circle glasses by Milena Kling

The fine collection of mouth-blown table glasses is composed of individual pieces, all hand crafted by traditional artisan glassmakers. The delicate linear engravings of the Circle crystal glasses result from the unique manufacture of each object in fine and pleated copper sheets.

Yakisugi by Kengo Kuma

The Yakisugi glassware collection follows its older sister, the lighting collection introduced at Salone del Mobile 2017, and is inspired by the ancient Japanese technique for preserving construction timber by charring its surface. Kengo Kuma explains that “*The idea behind the Yakisugi collection is about questioning the materiality of glass and natural wooden texture. My intention was to plumb the depth of a wooden soul, captured inside the glass.*”

Using dry wood in place of traditional pre-soaked molds, the wood is charred by molten glass. That leaves a permanent imprint of its scorched texture on the glass surface, making each piece an authentic original. This slight modification to a centuries-old technique produced a modern and minimalistic collection that combines simple, geometric forms with unusual, organic textures.

Frozen by Maxim Velčovský

The Frozen collection was inspired by the transformation of water into ice. This moment is similar to the work in a glassmaker's shop.

Velčovský allows the glass to spill over a metal form and seeks advantage in its natural properties. Each piece traces a unique record of the process, becoming an original. Velčovský found inspiration among pieces of ice created by nature and applied that element of randomness in nature to his glassmaking craft.

Glassmakers understand their material always 'freezes' at some moment in the process and only the most skilled hands are capable of creating a unique form.

Otto by Yabu Pushelberg

Otto projects an easy charm, developed through the exploration of how the individual pieces relate and interact. The stemmed drinkware features solid, weighty bases, a precisely etched texture, and clear Czech crystal. Alternating radial and tangential cut lines provide the same strict texture on both low and high silhouettes, while the proportion of cut vs.

clear glass varies from piece to piece.
